This morning The birds were hungry so I decided to stand on the path next to the feeder and see if they would come in for breakfast. The monsoon makes the light/sky pretty and the birds hungry - a perfect combination for pictures.

Probably everyone has Quail pictures, but thought I'd send them anyway because we love the quail. We keep the seed dish under the fire pit so it will stay dry in the rain (at least that's the theory). Anyway, behind the fire pit is a large rock we call "Pride Rock" because the quail love to stand on it. This morning the light was at the right angle to get a picture of the quail's face. He knows he is very handsome.
