10:00 a.m. - 11:00 a.m. - The Nature Conservancy Field Notes Live Presents "The Verde River - A Story of Community and River Friendly Living - A conversation about preserving one of Arizona’s vital waterways -- the Verde River. The Conservancy is working with communities, farmers, and other partners across the 195-mile-length of this river and its tributaries to replenish river flows. One of Arizona’s two designated Wild and Scenic Rivers, the Verde provides critical habitat for migrating birds and wildlife, and drinking water and recreation for millions of residents of the Verde Valley and Phoenix. They’ll share stories of successful efforts to preserve the health of this critical river. Audience participation is welcome.

12:00 p.m. to 1:00 p.m. -- Audubon Western Rivers Initiative - Where Did the Water Go? Impacts of Groundwater Overuse. There is a connection between flowing rivers and healthy groundwater levels. When more groundwater is taken out than is replenished, rivers, streams, and their surrounding habitat can be greatly affected. Communities that rely on groundwater as a primary water source are also affected when groundwater is overused in an area. In this second webinar of Audubon's three-part series, learn how groundwater supports habitats and communities, and dig into the consequences of its overuse.
